[NUMBER 443]

*Colonial Secretary's Office, Perth,
February 10, 1845.*

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to direct the publication of the following report which has been received from F. Helpman, Esq., commanding H. M. Col. schooner Champion, on his return from exploring the coast to the northward, between Champion and Gantheame Bays.

By His Excellency's command, PETER BROUN.

H. M. Colonial Schooner Champion, Gage's Roads, Dec. 19, 1844.

SIR,—I have the honor to report my return from a recent exploration to the northward, having visited the coast between Champion and Gantheame Bays, with a view to ascertain the position of the Hutt River Estuary, as well as to examine the coast between these localities; and I beg to furnish the following details on the subject for the information of His Excellency the Governor.

I coasted close in from Champion Bay, collecting angles and soundings, until in lat. 28° 16' 30" S. the low ridges of sand along the shore induced me to land, being then (as I concluded from the latitude given by Capt. Grey) in the immediate vicinity of the estuary. On reaching the summit of the highest coast hill, I found myself abreast of the centre of the inlet, which was void of water, but presented the appearance of a continuous sheet of salt as far as the eye could reach. Passing over the coast ridges, I came down, in about half a mile, to the edge of the estuary, and followed it in a southerly direction for about two miles, when I ascended another hill, from which I could clearly see the south end of it, which was covered with the same description of incrustation of salt.

A gorge at the south-east corner of the estuary is, probably, where the Hutt River discharges itself during the rainy season, but there was no appearance of water in any part of the flat, which was about two miles wide between the hills and the S.E. shore of the inlet.

Observing that the north extremity of the estuary, as seen from the hill just referred to, presented some slight appearance of water, I was induced to examine it, and found the sand ridges on the coast extremely low, nearly destitute of herbage, but giving the idea of having had water passing over them. This I judged to be the case from a few blades of very coarse grass, which were laid flat on the ground as if from the effect of running water.

From the highest point of these ridges, notwithstanding the smoke from the numerous native fires, the whole north end of the inlet was plainly seen to be covered with salty incrustations, similar to those previously referred to.

I conceive the point of land near which these latter observations were made, and where I landed the second time, to be "Shoal Point" of the chart; but, except that it is very low, I see no cause for its name, as the water was deep close to it, and having only a few rocks close off its extreme west point, within a quarter of a mile of the shore.

Following close in from Shoal Point, the coast is perfectly clear of dangers; but I observed no opening in the hills indicative of a river, nor could I discover any bay or place of shelter for shipping to resort to.

"Red Point," which is the western entrance of Gantheame Bay, is a very bold headland of considerable elevation, it is circular, and about 4 miles in extent. I landed at the east end of the red sand cliffs, taking a specimen of the rock.

The land to the northward from this promontory is of a white sandy appearance, having ridges of sand hills along the coast of moderate altitude.

The low state of the barometer, and the strong northerly winds, induced me to keep the vessel at a considerable offing. During the day the breezes were very fresh, and had it not been for the whale boat with which I was furnished, I should not have been able to effect a landing on any part of the coast which came under my observation. Under these circumstances, I was compelled most reluctantly to abandon the idea of spending much time in examining the interior.

The very dry state of the Hutt at this season seems to indicate that but little water flows into it at any time; and I am disposed to fancy, that the lagoon, or estuary, owes its formation to the breaking in of the sea over the low sand hills during the tempestuous gales of the winter months, more especially towards the north end of the inlet, where the sand ridges are lower than any other part of the coast in that vicinity.

On my return I visited the south island of the Abrolhos, where, from the immense numbers of sea birds, I was in hopes of realizing the secondary object of my search,—namely, the discovery of guano; but, although the ground was literally covered with the young birds, and the old ones rose above our heads almost in sufficient quantities to darken the air, I could discover no sign of any such deposit. The only thing having any affinity to this valuable manure being a description of peaty soil, of which I brought a sample away.

About 20 miles N.W. of Jurien Bay I observed two small islands, about two miles in length, which I have laid down in the chart recently lent me by His Excellency.

Extensive reefs continue to front the coast from Cape Leschenault to Point Moore, where they gradually cease in detached pieces, rendering it highly dangerous and imprudent to hover too closely to the shore during the night. We coasted during the day about two miles outside of them, and hauled off at night fall.

I can but repeat my regret that the absence of any shelter for the vessel should have compelled me to limit my researches to such narrow bounds, but the unsettled state of the barometer made me fearful as to the safety of the schooner, and necessarily put an end to my exploration.

I have the honor to be,

Sir,

Your most ob'd't humble serv't,

FRANK HELPMAN.

The Honorable the } Colonial Secretary. }
