Important to Mariners.

*Colonial Secretary's Office, Perth,

THE following report on Pollock Reef, is published for general information.

By His Excellency's command,
FRED. P. BARLEE,
Colonial Secretary.

POLLOCK REEF.

The above dangerous reef was seen by me whilst on a voyage from Adelaide to Swan River in the brigantine "Robert Clive" on 21st April, 1856, and by favourable observations was found to lie 14 miles in direction South half East (magnetic) from the nearest part of the South East Isles of the Recherche Archipelago.

This position on Flinder's Chart will be in lat., 34° 35' South; longitude, 123° 28½' East.

Passing 3½ miles Southward of the Reef at 10½ hours a.m., the weather being fine, and a long swell rolling in from the S.W., the shoal water was observed from aloft to extend about one mile in an East and West direction, and to be 200 yards in width, but breakers extended over only one third of that space, in probably 2 or 3 fathoms water. The shoalest part was near the centre, where the sea broke abruptly against a small rock which had apparently not more than 6 or 8 feet water on it.

As this reef lies in the direct track of vessels rounding the South East Isles, and is entirely under water, it is dangerous to approach in the night or in thick weather, for the soundings are deep close up to it, and give no warning of its vicinity.

The third South East Isle mentioned in the note upon Flinder's Chart does not exist.

J. S. ROE, Surveyor General.
