IMMIGRATION.

Colonial Secretary's Office, Perth, 21st October, 1882.

HIS Excellency the Governor directs it to be notified, for general information, that in order to further develop the system of Nominated Immigration at present in force in this Colony, persons wishing to obtain Free Passages from the United Kingdom for their friends, or such other persons as they may desire to introduce into the Colony, can obtain printed forms of application and all necessary information from the Immigration Officer at Perth, or from the Resident Magistrate of the district in which the applicant resides.

William Felgate, Esq., 27, Clements Lane, London, will continue to act as Emigration Agent.

Nominated Emigrants will be required, prior to being furnished with a passage, to sign an agreement to remain three years in the Colony, or refund to the Colonial Government the cost of their passage from England.

Nominated Emigrants who are too poor to pay their expenses to the port of embarkation will, on the production of a Certificate to that effect from the Minister or Constable of the parish in which such Emigrant resides, have their reasonable expenses paid on application to the Agent.

Persons resident in the Colony wishing to nominate Emigrants through the medium of friends in England may do so by application through the Immigration Officer, Perth; and upon the Emigrant so nominated being recommended to the Agent, a free passage on the usual conditions will be provided.

No charge will be made for mess, kit, or bedding provided for infants under one year old.

A certain number of single female domestic servants will be introduced annually, and persons requiring this class of servant are requested to communicate with the Immigration Officer, Perth, who will record their applications.

By His Excellency's Command,
GIFFORD,
Colonial Secretary.

NOTICE No. 2.

THE following information relating to "Beaver Reef," West Coast of Australia, is by Staff Commander J. E. Coghlan, R.N., H.M. surveying vessel "Meda," in charge of Joint Admiralty and Colonial Marine Survey of Western Australia, 1882.

All bearings are Magnetic.

Variation 5° Westerly in 1882.

BEAVER REEF* reported by the schooner "Beaver," in 1864, to lie in latitude 32° 6' S., longitude 114° 37' E., about 60 miles westward of the port of Fremantle, and 30 miles outside the 100 fathoms edge of the coast bank of soundings, has again been closely searched for during eleven days in the "Meda."

A discrepancy of 10 miles having been detected in the "Beaver's" original report to the Colonial Government between the recorded astronomical position of the reported reef and that by bearing and distance from Rottnest island, both positions were examined. The breakers reported by the schooner "Gift," in 1869, about 11 miles west of the astronomical position of "Beaver reef," were also searched for.

The parallel of latitude on which both dangers were supposed to lie, and also the parallels three and five miles on either side of it, were sounded along and traversed (a distance of 712 miles), within a space including 20 miles of latitude and 60 miles of longitude.

NON-INDICATIONS.—Lead and Look-out.—The deep-sea lead was kept going at short intervals by night and by day, and during the day-time a vigilant look-out was kept from aloft. Neither the eye nor the deep-sea lead afforded any indications of shoal water, there being depths of no bottom at 360 fathoms, and no bottom at 300 fathoms on the positions of the "Beaver" and "Gift" respectively, and no bottom at 850 fathoms about midway between them.

Temperatures.—The self-registering thermometers used while sounding showed 58° and 59° at the depth of 100 fathoms, and 64° and 65° (Fahrenheit) at the surface, within the distance of 20 miles north and south, 15 miles east, and 60 miles west of the "Beaver's" position. The reported bank would prove an obstruction to the Polar current which sets over its supposed position; no indications, however, of shoaler soundings by lower temperatures were obtained.

Sea-birds, etc.—With the exception of one albatross and three Cape pigeons, which staid by the vessel, no flocks of sea-birds nor shoals of fish (usually met with upon banks at sea) were observed. Several whales were seen.

Breakers, etc.—Moderate to strong south-westerly winds mostly prevailed, with a high swell, and judging from local experience the latter should have broken in 6 and 7 fathoms; the state of the sea also at times was such as to suspend sounding operations.

Vessels from Sunda strait and the northward approaching Fremantle on the parallel of Rottnest island, and also those from Adelaide bound to India round Cape Leeuwin (meeting winds north of west), must frequently pass near the position assigned to "Beaver reef." If strong winds between north and west prevail (opposing the Polar current) topping seas resembling breakers will be encountered in the neighbourhood of that reported danger.

NON-EXISTENCE.—The result, however, of the various researches (under direction of different officers) of five, two, five, two, and eleven days duration respectively, appears to be exhaustive, and to afford assurance of the non-existence of any bank or shoal in the vicinity of the alleged "Beaver reef."

SHARKS BAY—GASCOYNE RIVER.

NOTICE No. 3.

THE following information relating to portions of Sharks bay, West Coast of Australia, is by Staff Commander J. E. Coghlan, R.N., in charge of Joint Admiralty and Colonial Marine Survey of Western Australia, 1882.

[All bearings are Magnetic. Variation, South Passage 1° 30' W., and Gascoyne River 1° 0' Westerly in 1882.]

EPINAUX or FALSE ENTRANCE* is an inlet situated about 12 miles southward of South passage, and both openings taking a south-east direction with entrance points similar in appearance, the former is liable to be mistaken for the latter when approaching from the southward.

SOUTH PASSAGE is a channel leading southward of Dirk Hartog island into Sharks bay. Its western entrance between Steep and Surf points is obstructed by a narrow rocky bar (Outer bar), concave in shape, and steep-to on its seaward side, with depths of 2 and 4 fathoms water over it. The Outer bar was, until the recent examination, believed to have not less than 6 fathoms over it, the passage being recommended as a port of refuge for which a vessel might run in confidence and safety, during a south-west gale, if caught upon a lee shore off Dirk Hartog island. South passage should not be attempted except by vessels possessing local knowledge, and of not more than 12 feet draught.

Within the Outer bar the channel with four and five fathoms water takes a south-east direction for $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles to abreast of cape Ransonnet (south extreme of Dirk Hartog island). Thence it trends successively E.N.E., N.N.E., and N. by W., maintaining the same depths and affording anchorage throughout for about five miles until meeting the Inner bar.

LANDMARKS.—Steep point, the south entrance point of the passage, is a bold cliffy projection with a cairn of stones erected upon it, 10 feet high and 115 feet above high water, useful in distinguishing South passage from False entrance. Monkey rock, a small conspicuous bare islet, 11 feet above high water, lies about 2 cables eastward of Steep point, with sunken dangers surrounding it to the distance of 2 cables. Surf point, the north entrance point, is a narrow cliffy peninsula about 70 feet high, with two small rocky islets lying close-to, and sandy coast on either side of it. The south extreme of some hills on Dirk Hartog island (Herald heights) with a bare white summit about 350 feet high, lies about three-quarters of a mile westward of Surf point. At three-quarters of a mile eastward of the point there rises a bare sand hill about 200 feet high, with a well of fresh water at its western base. Surf point lies N.E. distant $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles from the cairn on Steep point. Ransonnet rocks, small, bare, and conspicuous, about 7 feet above high water, lie about 2 cables south-east of cape Ransonnet.

DANGERS.—Outer bar is the submarine continuation of Surf point. Ledges which uncover at low water and sunken dangers extend nearly a mile in a southerly direction from Surf point, and (except with off-shore winds) usually indicate themselves by the surf beating upon them. Thence the narrow rocky projection, becoming more submerged, curves to the eastward and joins Monkey rock, with depths of 2 and 4 fathoms upon, and 7 and 10 fathoms close seaward of the ledge.

South sand, with depths of 1 to 6 feet over it and deeper water inshore, extends in an E.N.E. direction from Ransonnet rocks, and thence trending more northerly terminates in a tongue forming the south side of Inner bar.

North sand, with depths of 4 and 6 feet over it, lies 4 cables northward of South sand, with depths of 12 to 17 feet between them. Both North and South sands are distinguished (August, 1882) by streaks of dark seaweed growing upon them.

East sand extends nearly 2 miles from the western shore of the Bellefin prong peninsula, with depths of 1 fathom and less water over it. Between the South and East sands there is a navigable channel with 4 and 5 fathoms water.

Inner bar lies between the North and South sands and has depths of 12 and 17 feet water, over a bottom of coarse sand and shells. A gut with 22 and 24 feet water passes close westward of North sand and Inner bar and becomes absorbed in the South sand.

DIRECTIONS.—South passage cannot be taken in safety by vessels of more than 12 feet draught. No specific directions can be given for entering it, but should a vessel without local knowledge be compelled by circumstances to take the passage, she must be guided by the eye between the breakers when crossing the Outer bar, and thence the lead will prove of service if carefully attended to. As a general guide, open out the passage by bringing a point on the south shore (with a small islet close-to) opposite cape Ransonnet well open of Monkey rock bearing S.E., and steer to pass 3 cables eastward of the latter, until over the Outer bar when a mid-channel should be kept until abreast of Ransonnet rocks. Thence E.N.E. and more northerly courses should be steered between the East and South sands, the former indicating itself by light colored water and the latter by dark streaks of seaweed. Crossing the Inner bar a vessel can be coned by the eye between the discolored water which marks the North and South sands; or by keeping a conspicuous sand patch on the eastern shore of Dirk Hartog island on the bearing of N.W. by N.

TIDES.—In South passage (August 1882), the tides were observed to be very irregular. The ebb stream attained a velocity of 3 knots at springs, causing heavy overfalls on the Outer bar. Strong southerly winds are reported to cause the water to fall 2 feet below the mean low water level or the standard for the reduction of soundings.

BAR FLATS, at the mouth of Freycinet reach, are reported to have shoaled and extended considerably in the direction of Middle bluff (Peron peninsula).

WOORAMEL RIVER, which flows into the eastern side of Sharks bay abreast of Pelican island, is reported to have anchorage close southward of its mouth, with a channel leading thereto available for vessels of 12 feet draught.

The Wooramel is the principal outlet for the local sandalwood industry.

PEARLING STATIONS are situated on Peron peninsula at cape Lesur and Lagoon point (Fresh water camp).

DORRE and BERNIER ISLANDS (unsurveyed) are reported to be much narrower than shown on the chart.

GASCOYNE RIVER flows into Sharks bay about 40 miles southward of cape Cuvier of the French (Freycinet), and is entered by two channels (North and South entrances) passing northward and southward of Babbage island respectively.

North entrance dries across at low water, and is barely available for boats at high water.

South entrance is 3 cables wide, and takes an easterly and thence north-easterly direction, until its junction with North entrance abreast of the north-east extreme of Babbage island. There is barely one foot at low water springs across the mouth of South entrance (if southerly winds prevail), but the channel is available for cargo boats at high water. On account of the many snags which obstruct the channel, a good look-out must be kept when entering, especially at high water.

Gascoyne townsite lies on the south shore, about half-a-mile within the South entrance. There are several stores erected, and other buildings in the course of erection (June, 1882), and the place is fast increasing in importance. It is proposed to lay out an additional townsite at the mouth of South entrance, separated from the present site by a swamp at high water.

EXPORTS consist principally of wool. There being no surveyed ports between Sharks bay and N.W. cape, the wool is brought overland to the Gascoyne from as far north as the Ashburton (or Curlew) river.

COMMUNICATION.—The local mail steamer calls at the Gascoyne on her way to Cossack, and on the return trip, monthly. Coasting vessels trade between Fremantle and Gascoyne river, and the wool ships call there for cargoes.

SUPPLIES.—Fresh meat, water, flour, and other stores in moderate quantities can be procured at the Gascoyne.

BEACONS.—A beacon 25 feet high and 42 feet above high water, pyramidal in shape and white-washed, is erected on the south extreme of Babbage island. It is to be removed to the site originally selected for it on the summit of the sand dunes on the western side of Babbage island, about three-quarters of a mile northward of its present position, at an elevation of 58 feet above high water.

A white-washed cask (vertical) beacon, 16½ feet above high water, is erected on Mangrove point.

OBSERVATION SPOT.—The site upon which Babbage island beacon is to be re-erected is situated in latitude 24° 52' 45" S., longitude 113° 39' E. The present beacon is in latitude 24° 53' 24" S., longitude 113° 39' 18" E.

TIDES.—It is high water, full and change, about 10 h. Springs rise 5 feet, neaps 2 feet. Strong south-east winds cause the water to remain about 2 feet below, and north-west winds about 2 feet above, the mean low water level to which the soundings are reduced.

ANCHORAGE.—The deepest water and best anchorage lies off the North entrance, where the depth of 14 feet and over will be found about 6 cables from the shore of Babbage island; that depth and less water extends one mile from the shore off the South entrance, and three miles from the shore at one mile southward of Mangrove point.

Similarly, the depths of 20 and 24 feet will be found off the North entrance at 1¼ and 2½ miles respectively from the shore of Babbage island, and 4 and 5 miles from the shore respectively at one mile southward of Mangrove point.

Marks.—Anchorage in 20 feet, sand bottom, will be found 1¼ miles from the shore with Babbage island (present) beacon bearing E. S.E.; Mangrove Point beacon bearing S.E. ¾ E.; and the highest part of the sand dunes on Babbage island, on which the beacon is to be re-erected, bearing E. ½ S. A vessel drawing 14 feet can find a berth three-quarters of a mile nearer the shore, with the above-mentioned marks bearing E.S.E., S.E. ¼ E., and N.E. by E. ½ E., respectively.

During strong southerly winds (which frequently blow for days together in Sharks bay) the most convenient berth for a vessel of 16 feet draught (enabling the cargo lighters to work with a leading wind) will be off the South entrance, with the above-mentioned marks bearing E. by N. ½ N., E. by S. ½ S., and N. E. ½ N., respectively. A continuance of strong southerly winds will reduce the above given depths 2 feet.

YULE CREEK is about 1½ cables wide and takes a south-easterly direction for about two miles, where it bifurcates and becomes absorbed in the sand flats. It is fronted by a bar with depths of 8 and 9 feet over it; but within the creek (which seems to have been a former channel of the Gascoyne) there are depths of 14 to 17 feet, available at high water for vessels possessing local knowledge, and less than 14 feet draught, if desirous of entering it to land stock. The mouth of Yule creek lies about half-a-mile southward of South entrance, and a vessel making use of it should steer in with Mangrove point beacon bearing E. by S. ¼ S. until Babbage island (present) beacon bears N.E., thence a general course of S.E. by E. ½ E. will lead up the creek and a vessel may haul alongside the sandflat extending from Mangrove point, and land stock upon it.

DIRECTIONS.—Vessels approaching the Gascoyne from the southward having passed through Naturaliste channel should, when abreast of Dampier reef, steer N.E. ¼ N. (allowing for tide) until the beacons on Babbage island and Mangrove point are distinguished, when they may anchor as convenient on the bearings and distances before given. The lead, if carefully attended to, will give good warning, bearing in mind that sand banks, which dry, and shoal water, with depths of 1 and 2 fathoms, extend 4 and 5 miles from the shore a few miles southward of the river's mouth.

Approaching from the northward, Babbage island (present) beacon, or the summit of the sand dunes on that island, should not be brought to bear south of S.E. until within 3 miles of the anchorage, thence it should not be brought to bear southward of E.S.E.

Within 10 miles north and south of Gascoyne anchorage a vessel may stand into 5 fathoms, and off to 14 and 15 fathoms about mid-way between Dorre and Bernier islands and the main.

WEATHER.—Sharks bay is occasionally, though rarely, visited by the outer circle of the cyclones which are experienced northward of the bay. A vessel, therefore, at anchor off the Gascoyne from December until the end of March should, upon indications of bad weather, be prepared to put to sea.

During the winter season (May till October) an occasional gale from the N.W., less severe and of shorter duration than those to the southward, is experienced. The barometer usually gives good warning, and vessels at anchor off the Gascoyne should on those occasions seek shelter under Bernier and Dorre islands.

COAST.—Mangrove point, which lies about half-a-mile southward of South entrance, is conspicuous, and from it the coast curves to the eastward for about three miles, and thence takes a general S.S.E. ½ E. direction for about 22 miles to Greenough point, over which there is a small conspicuous hummock.

Northward of Gascoyne river the coast forms a bight about 3 miles deep, the northern point of which lies N.N.W., distant about 11 miles from North entrance. Thence the coast continues in a N.N.W. direction for about 11 miles, beyond which point it was not explored during the recent survey, but appears to continue in a N.N.W. direction a further distance of 17 miles, to cape Cuvier of the French (Freycinet).

The sand dunes lie parallel to the coast, 100 to 300 feet high. Bejeling sand patch, about 19 miles northward of the Gascoyne, is conspicuous.

REEFS upon which the sea breaks heavily lie about one mile from the eastern shore, 23 or 24 miles northward of Gascoyne river.

CAUTION.—Babbage island having been recently found to lie about 12 miles north-westward of its supposed position, it is probable that the coast northward to cape Cuvier of the French (Freycinet) and southward to Greenough point, is also erroneously laid down.

That portion of the coast, therefore, not having been examined in detail, should be approached with caution and the lead kept going when standing towards it.
