Attestation of Instruments.

MY attention has been called to a practice, by persons attesting instruments, of noting in the attestation clause the fact that alterations, interlineations, or erasures have been made in the instrument prior to its execution, when the truth is the instrument has been so altered since its execution. Such a practice is most reprehensible, and is moreover fraudulent. No such instrument will be received for registration or otherwise, and all persons found offending will be proceeded against as the occasion may require.
