NOTES ON THE WEATHER, FOR APRIL, 1906.

This month was very hot throughout the State, every station recording a mean maximum considerably in excess of that for previous years. This excess amounted to nearly 10° at Nullagine. At the Observatory the mean maximum 80.2 was the highest yet recorded. There was a record spell of hot weather at the commencement and again at the end of the month. In the former case we had four successive days over 90°, and in the latter seven over 80°. The summer broke on the night of April 30th, when the first winter rains occurred. There had previously been a moderate downpour in South-West districts on the 19th and 20th, but this was not actually the commencement of the winter. The mean atmospheric pressure was about or slightly below the average for previous years. The total rainfall was very light throughout the State, and far below the normal. The first sign of frosty weather occurred on the 22nd, when the temperature of the surface of the ground fell to 28° at Katanning.
