THE NAVIGATION ACT, 1904.

Harbour and Light Department, Fremantle, 16th July, 1906.

³²¹²
1906

THE annexed Report and Finding of the Chief Harbour Master, Fremantle, under the provisions of "The Navigation Act, 1904," relative to the preliminary inquiry held by him into the circumstances attending the collision of the British Barque "Rollo" with the Bunbury Jetty Extension at noon on the 26th day of June, 1906, has been approved by the Hon. the Minister.

G. J. SINCLAIR,
Secretary.

⁵⁹⁶
1906

NAVIGATION ACT, 1904.

The Honourable the Colonial Secretary, Perth.

I have to report having, under the provisions of the above Act, held a preliminary inquiry into the circumstances attending the collision of the "Rollo" with the extension of the Bunbury Jetty while in tow of the "Vigilant" at noon on Tuesday, the 26th ult.

The "Rollo" is a British iron barque, registered in London, Official No. 74663, 945 tons gross and 878 tons net register, and owned by Messrs. J. I. Jacob & Co.

The "Vigilant" is a steam tug, built of wood, registered in Sydney, Official No. 106222, 80 tons gross and 55 tons net register, and owned by Messrs. Millars' Karri and Jarrah Co.

After taking the evidence of the Harbour Master, John G. Abrahamson; the Licensed Government Pilot, Job A. Symonds; George Bevan, Master of the barque "Rollo," holding a Board of Trade Foreign-going Master's Certificate, No. 012456 O.C., Liverpool; Charles Coalstad, Master of tug "Vigilant," also holding a Board of Trade Foreign-going Master's Certificate, No. 1290, Melbourne; and Griffith Morris, Engineer of the tug "Vigilant," I find that on the morning of the 26th ult. the barque "Rollo" was berthed at No. 2 Berth, on the West side of the Bunbury Jetty, with the steamer "Monaro," 2656 gross tonnage, occupying No. 1, or the Outer Berth, ahead.

Both vessels completed their loading on the morning of this day, and signalled for the tug. The tug first attended the "Monaro," and in half-an-hour had completed towing her off from the wharf (abreast the wharf, not to the Roads), and at 11:50 a.m. proceeded to attend to the "Rollo."

The wind was then between West and North-West moderate, with light showers, and smooth inside of the mole, with apparently a moderate swell outside.

The vessel was unmoored and in all readiness for the tug, with his port anchor out with 28 fathoms of cable broad off.

Pilot Symonds took charge of the vessel, and at 12:30 had tripped his anchor and was lying parallel to the jetty, about 120 feet off, with the tug "Vigilant" fast ahead, with about 45 fathoms of good new towline.

Everything then seemed favourable, and orders were given by the Pilot, who stood on the fore-castle head, with the Master, near the man at the wheel, to the tug for "Full Speed Ahead," and the vessel immediately gathered way, but when about 150 feet from the end of the new extension the tug, being then off the end of the breakwater, was seen to lose power, and the vessel sagged to leeward, and took the new structure with her quarter, about halfway down, and gradually fell on the jetty, forging ahead the meantime, and hung up amidships on the North-West corner, when her bow fell off to the North-East.

The vessel remained in this position from 5 to 10 minutes, doing considerable damage to the structure and herself, being practically then broadside on to the swell and weather, where at this position she had not the full advantage of the shelter of the breakwater.

Everything possible seems to have been done, both on the ship and the tug, but when the latter met the sea off the end of the breakwater her power was affected to such an extent as to considerably lessen the speed of the ship, which in the meantime drifted down on the Jetty, the drifting being possibly assisted by the strong ebb tide from the river, which, meeting the bank on the inside of the mole, would eddy back towards the jetty.

All the evidence possible was obtained, and after carefully considering same I am of opinion that the casualty was caused by the tug meeting a heavier sea outside the protection of the mole than was anticipated, thereby reducing the speed of the "Rollo" and thus allowing her to drift on to the jetty.

Everything possible under the circumstances appears to have been done by the Master of the barque "Rollo," the Master of the tug "Vigilant," and by Pilot Job A. Symonds, and there is no evidence to form a charge of any sort against the responsible officers.

There is no doubt, to my mind, that if the new extension had been properly stayed and completed in say, 50ft. sections, the damage would have been but slight.

The inquiry was held at the Harbour Master's Office, at Bunbury, on the 3rd inst.

I attach herewith copy of evidence taken, together with extracts from the logs of both vessels.

I might add that Mr. Barker, Crown Solicitor, was present at the inquiry and rendered me valuable assistance with advice, and Mr. Sinclair, the Secretary, acted as Clerk of Courts.

C. J. IRVINE,
Chief Harbour Master.
