HIS Excellency the Governor directs the publication for general information, of the following directions for entering Port Frederick on the River Mersey, Van Dieman's Land.

By His Excellency's command,
W. A. SANFORD,
Colonial Secretary.

DIRECTIONS FOR ENTERING PORT FREDERICK, ON THE RIVER MERSEY.

WHEN approaching from the Westward or from the Northward, vessels will first see the high land on the East side of it, with a patch of red earth to seaward.

The Mersey Bluff bears E.S.E. by compass from the Don 2½ miles, a bold front, with deep water to within half a mile seaward.

To enter the River Mersey, keep the Don Bluff open of the Mersey Bluff half-a-mile, until you bring two white beacons on the Western bank of the river in one. By keeping these beacons in one, the vessel will be taken to the Eastward of the white buoy upon the shoal on the Western end of the bar. A large tree, stripped of its branches and painted white, forms one of the beacons; the other, also painted white, is fixed upon sleepers on the bank of the river, near a smaller beacon with a pointer on it, which has been placed upon the Muscic Rock. When the vessel is near the latter, which must not be approached too near, she will, by keeping the West side of the river on board, go safe to her anchorage.

Vessels approaching from the Eastward, after passing Port Sorell, will observe Wright's Island 7½ miles to the Westward of Port Sorell, and 4 miles to the Eastward of the Mersey Bluff. This Island has a dangerous reef, known as the "Horse Shoe Reef," extending a mile to the Northward, upon which the sea breaks with great violence. Vessels must pass to the Northward, giving them a good berth.

The Mersey is the first opening to the Westward of Wright's Island, and may be known by the first bold headland to the Westward after passing the Horse Shoe Reef; then steer for that bluff till you bring the two before-named beacons in one.

With Westerly winds there is good anchorage in five fathoms with the Don Bluff, just open of the Mersey Bluff; the water shoaling from thence gradually to the Bar, upon which at high water there is, average tides, 16 feet of water. High water at full and change, half-past 11. Rise and fall, spring tides from 10 to 12 feet.

GEO. KING, Port Officer.
