No. 413.—C.S.O.

Colonial Secretary's Office, Perth, 22nd September, 1879.

IIS Excellency the Governor directs the publication of the following Telegram, received from Mr. A. Forrest, Commander of the North-West Exploration Expedition.

By His Excellency's Command,
ROGER TUCKFD. GOLDSWORTHY,
Colonial Secretary.

Katherine Station, September 19th, 1879.

To the Honorable the Commissioner of Crown Lands, Perth.

Left Beagle Bay on the 20th April, and travelled about East to King's Sound, reaching it near to Disaster Bay; thence keeping a short distance inland, we proceeded to the mouth of the Fitzroy River, in latitude 17° 41′ South, longitude 123° 36′ East, crossing on our way a large river (emptying itself into King's Sound) which we followed up to its source, besides numerous other streams. The country was all well grassed and watered.

Followed the Fitzroy upwards to latitude 18° 30′ south, longitude 125° 20′ east; the river then trended generally about N.E. to latitude 17° 42′ south, longitude 126° 10′ east, when it was discovered outflowing from a high table range 2000 feet high, and were unable to follow it any further. Splendid alluvial flats, well grassed on each bank of the river for at least 20 miles. From this gorge we travelled along under foot of this range, without finding any pass through it, to Secure Bay, in latitude 16° 24′ south, longitude 124° 28′ east. The country was well grassed and watered, but very rough.

At Secure Bay our first difficulties commenced; the high range falling abruptly into an arm of the sea. After some trouble we succeeded in getting over the high range, but all our attempts to get any further towards the Glenelg were unsuccessful, although Stephen Range was visible in the distance.

After spending a fortnight in making roads, and after losing 10 horses, owing to the rough nature of the country, we walked 10 miles and ascertained that it was utterly impossible to get through these ranges to the Glenelg, and as we had followed the high range all the way from where the Fitzroy entered them without finding a passage through them, our only course was to retrace our steps. Therefore, after getting clear of the ranges, which occasioned us some trouble, we travelled back to the Fitzrov, keeping about twenty miles to the South of our outward track; passed through a fine grassy and well watered country, and again reached the Fitzroy on 8th July. The question I had now to consider was,—whether to return to Beagle Bay, or to explore Eastward to the boundary of the Colony; the latter course was decided upon, and, with 13 horses (all that remained), and provisions calculated to last 50 days, we started on our journey. Followed up a more Easterly branch of the Fitzroy, which joined the main river in latitude 18° 4′ S.; we followed along it to its source in latitude 18°S. and longitude 127° 40′, crossed over a range which formed a watershed, and passed through a splendid grassy and well-watered country all the way to the boundary of the Colony (longitude 129° E.), which we crossed in latitude 16° 50', the country being some of the finest in Australia—open grassy plains, running springs at every mile. Crossed a large river coming from the Westward in longitude 128° 10′ E.; followed it for 40 miles to the Northward when it turned more to the Westward, and being short of provisions and a sick party I regret to say was unable to follow it any further. Good grassy country as far as the eye could reach on each side of the river.

From the boundary of the Colony we bore N.E., crossing Sterling Creek in latitude  $16^{\circ}$  30' S., and the Victoria River at its junction with the Wickham. The country was all well grassed and watered.

From the Victoria River bore E.N.E. through a magnificent country to latitude 15° 50′ S., and longitude 132° E., when for the first time we were unable to find water. After searching for some days, and having now only eight horses, owing to our having to kill some of them for food, and some of my party being unwell, I decided on risking a push through for the Telegraph Line. On the 29th August, left our camp, accompanied by Arthur Hicks, on our two best horses, and on the 1st September arrived at the Telegraph Line, having travelled 100 miles. After travelling Northerly along the Line some distance, met a Government party repairing a portion of it, who kindly lent me horses and rations, and, returning, reached the camp on the 11th, and found all well; and we managed to reach the Katherine Station today in safety, receiving, on our arrival, every kindness from Mr. Murray, the officer in charge of the Katherine Telegraph Station.

In conclusion, the chief results of the Expedition have been the discovering of the course and source of the Fitzroy and other large streams, together with an area of 20 millions of acres of good well-watered country, suitable for pastoral purposes, besides a large area suitable for the culture of sugar, coffee, and rice. In addition to this, great trouble and care has been given to the construction of a map of the country; and although I much regret that I was unable to accomplish the Far-North Exploration, I trust the large extent of good country discovered will recompense the Colony for the cost of the undertaking.

The health of my party has been bad, James Carey suffering for nearly three months, and my brother Matthew from a severe attack of sunstroke. My two natives are still weak and much reduced. The rest of us have had good health. Every member of the Expedition has done his best to further its success.

Large numbers of natives were seen, but we had no trouble with them.

From the Fitzroy to here, we had to walk nearly the whole way, and the scale of rations was very poor and scanty. I have worked harder to bring this Expedition to a success than I have ever done in my life before, and if I have failed in any particular, it has been on account of the roughness of the country, over which I had no control. The fact that we lost ten horses in trying to penetrate these ranges, points to the fact that we tried hard to get through them.

I sincerely trust that this report of our proceedings may meet with His Excellency the Governor's and your approval.

Particulars as to our return at an early date.

ALEXANDER FORREST,

Commander N. W. Exploring Expedition.
