RAINFALL FOR THE YEAR 1904

(Completed as far as possible),

AND AVERAGES FOR PREVIOUS FIVE OR MORE YEARS.

It will be seen that, on the whole, the fall for 1904 was in excess of the average for previous years. There were a few exceptions, notably in the North-West, between Cossack, Nullagine, and Broome, and in the neighbourhood of Geraldton. On the other hand, the excess was very marked due East of Perth and in the next degree South

The monthly distribution may be seen from the following very brief description:—

January.—Very heavy in the Kimberley district; elsewhere light.

February.—Above the average in East Kimberley, but elsewhere very light.

March.—Heavy in South-West and South districts, and generally above the average.

April.—Heavy in South-West district between Perth and Albany, also in the Kimberley; elsewhere light.

May.—Mostly about an average, but heavy on the Coolgardie and Murchison fields and in the far North.

June.—Very heavy in South-West districts, above the average in the tropics and Southern districts, but light in central latitudes and on the North Coolgardie fields.

July.—Remarkably heavy in the North-West and interior, normal in the West and South-West districts, and nil in East Kimberley.

August.—About or slightly above the average from Perth southwards, and over the goldfields; otherwise light.

September.—About or slightly below normal between Perth and Albany, heavy throughout the rest of the State South of the tropics; little or none in the tropics.

October.—Heavy South of latitude 29° (Geraldton), but very little North of that parallel.

November.—About normal in South-West and South districts; elsewhere very light.

December.—A heavy fall along a strip from Geraldton through the lower Coolgardie fields to Esperance; otherwise normal, though patchy in the tropics.
