THE VERMIN ACT, 1918.

Department of Agriculture,
Perth, 19th September, 1935.

Ex. Co. No. 1893; Agric. No. 2716/16.
HIS Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor in Executive Council has been pleased to amend the Regulations made under and for the purposes of "The Vermin Act, 1918," and published in the Government Gazette on the 21st day of March, 1919, by repealing Regulation 94 thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a new Regulation 94, as follows:—

94. Subject as hereinafter provided, a rabbit-proof fence shall consist of posts and strainers and at least three wires or two wires and a top rail. The posts, if round, shall not be less than four inches in diameter at the small end, except in the case of mulga or jam posts, when three inches shall be deemed sufficient. If split posts are used, they shall not be less than eighteen square inches in area or three inches in breadth at the smaller end. The posts shall be of sound timber and placed not less than twenty-one inches in the ground and not more than eighteen feet apart. The strainers shall not be less than six inches in diameter at the small end and shall be of sound timber and placed three feet in the ground and not more than one hundred and twenty-eight yards apart. The netting shall be attached to two wires, the top one of which shall be thirty-six inches above the ground; the other wire shall be about twenty-two inches above the ground. The netting shall be attached to each of the two wires, with wire ties not more than three feet apart. The netting shall be sunk below the surface of the ground perpendicularly six inches. The use of plain or barbed wire above the netting shall be optional.

Provided that, in places where the presence of solid rock at or below the natural surface of the ground along the line of the fence renders impracticable the sinking of posts or strainers and the sinking of netting below the ground to the depth hereinbefore prescribed, it shall be deemed sufficient compliance with this regulation if the posts and strainers are sunk to the said rock and made firm by means of sills and struts and if the netting is sunk to the face of the said rock and any excess of the netting is bent outward from the line of the fence and kept and maintained in close contact with the face of the said rock by means of earth, stones, or other substantial and heavy materials, and the fence in all other respects conforms with the requirements of this regulation.
