Appeal No. S2/82.

Decision of Tribunal.

By letter dated 30 April 1982, the applicant Union submitted to the Tribunal for arbitration an application to amend the Government School Teachers' Salaries Award (1981) dated 20 November 1981.

The Union seeks a comprehensive review of the Award and claims relief against provisions which are now said to be unjust. Substantial changes are sought in the following areas:

1. Salaries.

Increases in salaries ranging from 32% to 46% are claimed under three heads:

- (i) Adjustments required to establish the current salaries of teachers to the same relativity as those which existed in 1974.
- (ii) An increase of 16.4% based on community wage movement.

Mrs. Preuss for the Union told the Tribunal that the amount claimed here was determined in accordance with the adjustment provided in the metal industries decision of the Australian Conciliation and Arbitration Commission handed down on 18 December 1981 (see print No. E 8389—Exhibit 2). She went on to say—

This adjustment has become recognised as the community movement of $25 plus $14 in June. The 16.4% is calculated on the wage of a fitter which before the agreement... was $209.60 of which $12.70 was the salary supplementary payment. In accordance with the decision the salary was increased to $243.90 which was made up to an increase of $25 to the basic salary and a $9.30 increase to the supplementary payments. This amounts to an overall wage increase of 16.4%.

- (iii) An adjustment to reflect the average increase of the Consumer Price Index for the six capital cities for the December (1981) quarter viz. 4.5%.

2. Scope.

The Union seeks to limit the coverage of the award to members of the Union only.

3. Automatic Variations.

Part 1 of the Award to be amended to provide as follows:

1. The pay rates prescribed in this Award or in variations to this Award, shall be varied to the extent necessary to give effect to the six capital cities Consumer Price Index adjustments on a quarterly basis and any additional salary or wage component contained in any decision of the Australian Conciliation and Arbitration Commission in a National Wage Case made during the currency of this Award and expressed to be on general economic grounds and which has general application.

2. The pay rates prescribed in this Award shall be increased by 6% from the beginning of the first pay period to commence on or after 1 June 1982. This amount being discounted by any increase granted in accordance with Clause 1, Part I—General.
3. Liberty to apply for the Award to be reopened after November is granted to the parties.

In answer to the claim the respondent says that the application is premature and that in the prevailing circumstances no review of the terms of the Award can be entertained before the expiration of 12 months from the date of the commencement of the operation of it.

The Award is expressed to operate for a term of three years and the date of operation as to salaries, allowances and additional payments, deemed to have commenced to take effect from the beginning of the first pay period commencing on or after 27 August 1981.

Under the provisions of the Government School Teachers' Arbitration and Appeal Act 1979 the Tribunal is empowered to make such awards as in its opinion are necessary for the proper exercise by it of its jurisdiction under Part III. Section 26 of the Act provides that an Award shall be for three years unless the Minister and the Union consent to a term of a lesser period. As to the review of the terms of an award, section 26 (2) (c) provides that:

- (c) at any time after the expiration of the first twelve months from the date of commencement of the operation of an award or after the expiration of any period of twelve months from the date of commencement of the operation of any variation thereof, application may be made under this Part to the Tribunal for a review of all or any of the provisions of the award, and the Tribunal may vary or rescind all or any of those provisions.

Amendments to an award may be made at any time subject to the provisions of subsection (3) of that section which provides:

- (3) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) and paragraph (c) of subsection (2), the Tribunal may, on application made under this Part, vary or rescind all or any of the provisions of an award if in its opinion—

- (a) circumstances have arisen which, at the time the award was made, or when the provisions were, or the provision was, last reviewed under this Part, could not reasonably have been foreseen by the parties; and
- (b) those circumstances render those provisions or that provision of the award no longer just.

The Union claims that circumstances have arisen which at the time the Award was made could not reasonably have been foreseen and those circumstances render the provisions sought to be amended no longer just. To the contrary the respondent claims that no circumstances which could not reasonably have been foreseen have arisen. Alternatively if any such circumstances have arisen they have not rendered any provision of the Award unjust.

Mrs. Preuss told the Tribunal that the Union accepted that the decision handed down on 20 November 1981 was just and equitable when it was made but contends that it has been rendered unjust by circumstances which have occurred since that time. On the issue of the power to amend an Award on the grounds of unforeseen circumstances arising and as to the meaning of "no longer just", she referred to, inter alia, a decision of the Industrial Commission of Western Australia in Court Session in a matter between the Electrical Trades Union and the Electrical Trades Association (Vol. 60 W.A.I.G. 284). Whilst the Tribunal would endorse the statements of principle set out in the reasons of Mr. Commissioner Kelly the findings in that appeal do not provide any material assistance to the Union's case here. Mrs. Preuss said:

The Union ... is in this case not attempting a retrial of the work value case which was presented in 1981 but rather is attempting to establish that there has been a material change in the economic conditions in which teachers in this State work, and that there has been a change in the general wage determining structure of Australia and that there has been a general community wage movement from which teachers in this State have not received any benefit.

The Union submits that in the previous decision of this Tribunal a determinative condition was the comparative value of teacher salaries to those in the Eastern States. This value has now depreciated and an adjustment is required.

The whole situation has been further complicated by the cessation of wage indexation and although this was known to the Union and briefly referred to in its submissions in the last case ... the actual ramifications of the cessation could not be foreseen.

The centralised system of wage fixation based on indexation was brought to an end by the Australian Conciliation and Arbitration Commission in its decision of 31 July 1981 (print E7300). It was quite clear from that decision that there would not be any variation in wage rates based on movement in the Consumer Price Index for 12 months from the March 1981 quarter. No opportunity was afforded the Tribunal by the parties in the 1981 case to even consider a formula for variation other than that which appears in the Award at the present time.

The Union strongly argues that the decision of the Australian Conciliation and Arbitration Commission in the last national wage case handed down on 14 May 1982 could not have been reasonably foreseen. In that decision of course no increase on the grounds of movement in Consumer Price Index or for any other reason was granted. It was expected, the Tribunal was told, that an increase based on the Consumer Price Index would have been awarded. Whether that anticipation was reasonable in the circumstances warrants further comment.

It is clear that the principle argument for reopening the Award is based on the movement in wage levels since it came into operation. Mrs. Preuss put the point in these terms:

One of the major reasons which has been relied on by arbitral authorities when reopening awards during the current term has been a dramatic movement in wages which could not have been foreseen when the award was handed down. These cases were particularly common during 1974 which, as I am sure the Tribunal is aware, has been identified as the period of wage explosion and which is seen by many as the reason why wage indexation was initially introduced.

In support of that proposition the Tribunal was referred to the decision of the Industrial Commission of New South Wales handed down on 21 June 1974 in the matter of the Steel Industry Awards (see exhibit 7) wherein Cahill, J. had this to say:

... for a union to make an application to the Commission for additional wage increases in awards made by consent less than six months ago—awards which prescribed substantial and indeed, for the steel industry, unprecedented, wage increases—is quite an unusual step to take ... Be that as it may, what the application seeks is that the Commission should reopen the awards made by consent such a short time ago and vary them against the will of the employer parties, on the subjects of wage rates and period of operation. The Commission, for obvious reasons, has always set its face against reopening awards, and particularly consent awards, during their currency, except where it is satisfied that compelling reasons, or "good and cogent" reasons, as it is more usually stated, make it proper to do so.

His Honour went on to say:

... because of wage increases of unprecedented magnitude in significant and widespread sections of industry notably the metal industry in which a flat increase of $15 per week for all classifications had been negotiated and also because of other movements and wage rates, the bringing forward of agreed or awarded increases and the reopening by consent of other awards it could justifiably be said that new general wage levels had been established.

His Honour held that the establishment of new general wage levels could not have been reasonably foreseen by the parties when the consent awards were made in December 1973 and that there were good and cogent reasons for reopening the awards. The same awards were reopened some six months later (see exhibit 8). In his reasons handed down on 4 December 1974, Cahill, J. said:

It would be a denial of justice to refuse to make any variation to the wage rates until the term of the awards expired in June 1975, because that would mean that for a considerable period the steel industry production workers would be at a serious disadvantage as against employees in the community generally, and in particular as against other employees in the steel industry, metal tradesmen, tradesmen's assistants, riggers, electrical tradesmen, tradesmen's assistants, riggers, electrical and transport workers, who work under the same awards whose wage rates have been increased in the last three months and of whom many would be eligible to receive further wage increases before the wage rates of production workers again became susceptible to review having regard to the expiry dates of the awards.

Mrs. Preuss comments:

The only difference which has arisen in 1982 as opposed to 1974 is that the metal trades adjustment is now $25 plus $9 supplementary payments rather than the $15 and $9 adjustments which occurred in 1974. The union ... considers that there has been a general wage movement which should not have been anticipated by the union or the parties in 1981.

There was clear justification for finding that in 1974 there occurred wage movements of dimensions which could not reasonably have been foreseen in 1973. The events which have taken place post indexation must now be interpreted in the knowledge of what happened immediately before indexation was introduced.

From what is before the Tribunal about 40% of the adjustments of salaries now sought is based on the decision in the metal industries case given on 18 December 1981 (exhibit 2). In that case the parties produced an agreement to the Commission which was sought to be implemented under the provisions of section 28 of the Conciliation and Arbitration Act which empowers the Commission to certify a memorandum of agreement or make a consent award. The Commission did issue a consent award under which the agreed increases in wages were to apply for twelve months. The Commission expressly excluded from the award those steel industry establishments where the employers had not expressly consented to increases. The Commission acknowledged that it would be unrealistic to assume there would not be a flow on. On that point Mrs. Preuss comments:

It is this flow which could not be seen by the parties in the union's last case and it is the magnitude and speed of this flow which makes it unjust for teachers in this State to have to wait until September to receive what the rest of the community has already received.

Since the commencing of the operation of the subject award adjustments have been made to the salaries of teachers in every other State. As a consequence the comparative value of teachers' salaries has depreciated. Mr. O'Connor for the Minister produced an analysis of salary rates for teachers as at 4 June 1982 and included in that analysis average salary comparisons for teachers on automatic scales (see exhibit A) as set out below:

From the above figures it appears that the teachers in New South Wales enjoy a marked advantage over their counterparts in all the other States. Mrs. Preuss told the Tribunal that the teachers of New South Wales had before the Industrial Commission of New South Wales an application for a further increase of 5.9% being the total of the increases in the Consumer Price Index for the December 1981 and March 1982 quarters. Since the publication of the subject award and on 22 December 1981 the teachers in New South Wales obtained an increase of 4.3% being an adjustment for the June and September 1981 quarterly movements in the Consumer Price Index. Again on 7 April 1982 the Industrial Commission of New South Wales granted further increases to workers covered by the Hospital Employees Administrative and Clerical (State Award) and to Crown employees (including teachers) ranging from 7 to 10%. In the reasons for the latter decision the Commission said:

... the employees the subject of the present application are entitled to salary increase in order to allow them reasonably to share in the post-indexation community wide wage movement the existence of which has been established to our satisfaction.

One of the ramifications of the cessation of indexation which the Union claims could not have been reasonably foreseen was the failure of the Australian Commission to make any upward adjustment of wages to reflect the movements in the Consumer Price Index since March 1981 in the National Wage Case decision handed down on 14 May 1982 (Print E9700). The fragility of the indexation system has from time to time been emphasized by the Australian Commission since the middle of 1979. In the decision in the National Wage Case of 9 January 1981 the Commission made the following comments:

Eighteen months ago, the Commission announced that it had come to the brink of abandoning indexation and it said:

We have pulled back from the brink so that all concerned can consider the proposal which we will make in conjunction with our decision on the unions' claims. If our initiative fails to achieve a satisfactory consensus, there would seem to be little point in persisting with the package. An orderly centralised system of wage fixation cannot survive on a voluntary basis unless the participants demonstrate a firm commitment to its essential requirements. That commitment is lacking. (Print E267, p. 2.)

The Conference which followed that decision left a number of important issues still unresolved and these were debated in the proceedings related to the six-monthly review towards the end of 1979. In the light of the submissions in that case the Commission decided to persist with the system. It said:

Despite the absence of consensus on the structure of a system and on the principles that should govern its operation, we have been influenced not only by the universal desire that a centralised system should continue but also by the suggestion that there has been a significant narrowing of differences between many of the parties. (Print E1681, p. 3.)

The course of events since then and the submissions before us on this occasion have led us to the conclusion that the circumstances of 18 months ago are still with us.

Subsequent to that decision an enquiry was pursued which resulted in the publication of a refined principles of wage determination on 7 April 1981. Unfortunately, the stresses on the system were exacerbated in the ensuing weeks and as a result the Commission decided to abandon indexation in its decision of 31 July last. That decision concluded with the statement that:

Any application for adjustment of wages or conditions on economic grounds will not be heard before February 1982.

It is arguable that there has not been a national wage case in the accepted sense since that decision. The Tribunal refers to the submissions put to the Commission by the ACTU. As to the nature of the claims before it the Commission with reference to those submissions said:

In the course of its submissions, the ACTU indicated that the current claim differed from past national wage claims in that it did not seek a general wage increase based on economic factors for all wage and salary earners covered by Federal awards. Notwithstanding the wording of the formal applications the ACTU explained that in effect it sought on behalf of its members a declaration or direction from this Bench on a number of points which would form the basis of subsequent award adjustment case by case.

The essence of the claims of the ACTU were explained in these terms.

1. The ACTU argued that since the end of 1981 a clear community movement has emerged and that movement is in the order of $25 per week at the tradesman level. It sought a direction for a flow on of this $25 tradesman standard with appropriate relativity increases in other classifications to all wage and salary earners.

2. The ACTU sought a mid-term adjustment of $14 based on the metal industries statement.

3. The Commission said that:

While the ACTU is not arguing for the $25-$14 catch-up at tradesman level on the basis of prices and productivity distribution, the increase sought represents the magnitude of economic factors which have been accommodated or traded off by various industry agreements on a sectional basis. In further explanation the ACTU said:

Thus price movements up to the end of the September quarter are part of the $25 standard, price movements up to the end of the March quarter 1982 are part of the $14 mid-term adjustment and known productivity increases since 1974-75 are accommodated in the catch-up application.

4. In addition to catch-up based on community movement the ACTU argued that it should remain open for additional increases to be granted arising from factors such as work value anomalies and inequities.

In relation to the principle claim of the ACTU the Commission ruled against giving the direction sought. Referring to the metal industry tradesman settlement claimed as the community standard the Commission said:

Attached to this benchmark is the claim on special factors which we have discussed in some detail. We have indicated our difficulty both with the identification of a community standard and with risks of double counting and leap-frogging inherent in the unclassified application of special factors. And accordingly we are not prepared to give guidance or direction in the specific terms of the package sought by the ACTU.

Referring to the economic impact of the metal industry agreement the Commission added:

An extension of the metal industry standard generally would result in a substantial increase in labour cost at a difficult time for the economy.

Mrs. Preuss provided the Tribunal with a wealth of statistical material relating to the value of teachers salaries when looked at against wage movements generally over award payments, and allowances. Much of that material bore little or no relevance to a claim to reopen an award under the terms of section 26 (3) of the Tribunal Act. Mr. O'Connor contended in effect that the Union's application was misconceived because it sought a general review of the award when the jurisdiction of the Tribunal at this point of time is limited to the power to vary for the purpose of remedying injustice flowing from circumstances which could not be reasonably foreseen at the time the award was made. There is persuasive force in his argument.

The Tribunal finds that the Union has erred in bringing forward claims based on circumstances which are clearly without the confines of section 26 (3). The claim for an adjustment of relativities back to 1974 is simply not open. The volume of material which falls outside the time span covered by section 26 (3) cannot be called in aid. Again there is no justification at all in these proceedings for the claim for an amendment to the Scope clause. On the question of the automatic adjustment provisions of the Award the Tribunal finds that the proposal of the Union is inappropriate but considers that the parties should confer before the terms of the Award are next placed under scrutiny with a view to reaching a consensus as to provisions which would be fair to both employer and teachers.

In relation to the claims for salary variations the Tribunal finds that there are two compelling facts which support the applicant, viz.:

1. At the time the award was issued the rates therein prescribed placed teachers in W.A. at the top of the salary tree. Since then they have fallen to being the lowest paid as a result of awards to teachers in other jurisdictions.
2. The parties contemplated that before the expiration of the first year of the Award there would flow from the Australian Commission an upward adjustment based on movements in the Consumer Price Index. No such adjustment has been made nor is one likely within that period.

The Tribunal, in bringing down the Award, was very much aware of the inevitability of teacher salaries in other States being varied from time to time. The volatile nature of salaries in the present economic climate means that the relative standing of any one group will not remain constant.

In relation to the second point Mr. O'Connor argues that whilst the lack of an adjustment for CPI movements was unforeseen, no injustice resulted because all workers bound by national wage case decisions are in the same boat. The evidence here does establish that teachers in at least three States have received adjustments specifically on general economic grounds during the relevant period.

The test as to what is reasonably foreseeable is an objective one (see The Heron II Czanarnikow Ltd v. Koufos 1966 2 A.E.R. at 604) that is to say, depends on the knowledge which a reasonable person in the circumstances would reasonably be expected to possess.

After giving due weight to the arguments lucidly advanced by Mr. O'Connor the Tribunal is of the opinion that an interim adjustment of salaries should be made on the grounds that the degree of deterioration in the relative value of teachers salaries in this State was not reasonably foreseen due in the main to the lack of adjustments resulting from movements in the CPI. In the circumstances an increase of the order suggested by Mr. O'Connor is considered proper. The Tribunal therefore orders an interim increase across the board of 7.5%, and that such increase be of effect from the beginning of the first pay period commencing on or after 27 May 1982—the date it is assumed the Union's case would have been completed had the adjournment sought by the respondent not been granted.

Until further order of the Tribunal the amount of the increases hereby granted shall be taken into account in determining the amount of any increase under the provisions of Part I of Clause 5 of the Award.

In conclusion the Tribunal feels compelled to make some critical comment in relation to the claim of the Union as presented. It is conceded by the Union that the rates fixed when the Award was handed down were fair and just. In the space of time down to the date this claim was submitted to arbitration it is alleged that unforeseen circumstances have arisen which call for increases up to 46% to render such rates just. What in effect the Union has claimed is an average increase more than 300% higher than that awarded to teachers in New South Wales—the salary pace-setters. Excessive claims do nothing for the credibility of the Union and are detrimental in that they:

1. build up expectations in teachers that cannot be realised;
2. tend to lower the standing of teachers in the eyes of the community at large.

It is the conception of the Tribunal that teachers in this State are of high repute industrious and play their part in providing an admirable educational service in Government schools. In the promotion of their economic and professional interests, teachers deserve representation of a high order.
