SALARIES AND ALLOWANCES ACT 1975

Variation of a Determination made by the Salaries and Allowances Tribunal pursuant to section 6A of the Salaries and Allowances Act 1975 (as amended).

IT is notified for general information that the Determination of the Salaries and Allowances Tribunal published in the Government Gazette No. 20 dated 27 February 1987 is varied with effect from 1 January, 1988 as follows.

Section 5—Commutation Figure

In December 1987 amendments were made to the Parliamentary Superannuation Act and the Salaries and Allowances Act wherein the Tribunal was given the jurisdiction to determine the commutation figure to be used when calculating lump sum payments in lieu of annual pensions.

The Tribunal in conducting a review encompassing the area dealing with the commutation figure, found that improvements could be made which, in the long term, would benefit the State in terms of a reduced liability to the Parliamentary Superannuation Fund. As a result of this, the Tribunal sought a further amendment to the Salaries and Allowances Act and the Parliamentary Superannuation Act that would enable it to determine a variable commutation figure.

Parliamentary superannuation cannot be validly compared with any other form of Public Sector superannuation. Members are required to contribute 12.5 per cent of their salary to the Fund, a figure upward of two and one half times that paid in most public sector areas. From this contribution, a member can, provided he or she retains their position in Parliament long enough to qualify, receive a pension that varies between 46 and 75 per cent of final salary. At present when a member elects to commute a pension, then the lump sum entitlement is 12 times the members final pension entitlement. The commutation figure can vary between 5.5 and 9 times the members final salary depending upon his or her length of service.

In recent times approaches have been received from the Trustees of the Parliamentary Superannuation Fund for a general increase in the commutation figure from 12 to 14. Whilst such a change has actuarial support, the Tribunal is of the opinion that the present figure of 12 at age 65 is equitable, both from the members and the State's point of view. The transition in recent times to younger Parliamentary representation will however mean that the liability of the pension scheme, hence the State, will increase considerably, in that members will be able to leave Parliament after 12 years and receive a pension for life.

Whilst younger members leaving Parliament may be forced to commute as a result of financial or other necessity, it can be assumed that, wherever possible, they would elect to receive an annual pension for life due to the on-going financial advantage this provides.

In any situation where a person can choose whether to receive a life pension or a lump sum there must be an incentive involved to attract members to elect to receive a lump sum payment.

It is for this reason that the Tribunal considers that the commutation figure should be established according to the members age at the time of leaving Parliament.

As mentioned previously the Tribunal maintains the current commutation figure of 12 is satisfactory at age 65, however, for each year of age below 65 at the age of retirement or resignation, the Tribunal has determined that the commutation figure is to be increased by .1 per cent up to a maximum of 14.

This we believe will provide the necessary incentive for members to elect for lump sum payments rather than on-going pensions and in so doing should considerably reduce the on-going liability to the State.

Notice of Invitation for Applications for Exploration Permits

AN error occurred in the notice published under the above heading on page 2468 of Government Gazette (No. 69) dated 15 July 1988 and it is now corrected by deleting from the section headed "Applications" the third paragraph concerning assignment and transfers within the initial two years and including the following in its place—

" Award of permits will be based upon the adequacy of the work program for the first two years of the permit. The successful applicant will be required to fulfil the minimum commitment for each of those years without variation. This is known as the firm commitment phase, however the balance of the program can be negotiated according to the results of prior exploration.

It should be noted that applications in respect to Areas L88-5 and L88-6 are expected to include the drilling of wells within the first two years. "
