 - (b) to protect individuals and communities from diseases and other public health risks and to provide, to the extent reasonably practicable, a healthy environment for all Western Australians; and

 - (f) to support programmes and campaigns intended to improve public health; and
 - (g) to facilitate the provision of information to decision-making authorities about public health risks and benefits to public health that may result from certain proposals; and
 - (h) to provide for the collection, disclosure and use of information about the incidence and prevalence of diseases and other public health risks in the State, and certain other conditions of health, for research or public health purposes; and
 - (i) to reduce the inequalities in public health of disadvantaged communities; and
 - (j) to provide for functions relating to public health to be performed by the State and local governments.
- (2) In the pursuit of the objects of this Act, regard must be had to the principles set out in the Table.

Table

1. Sustainability principle

- (1) Sound public health practices and procedures should be adopted as a basis for sustainability for the benefit of all people and the community today, while consideration is given to the public health, social, economic and environmental needs of future generations.
- (2) Public health, social, economic and environmental factors should be considered in decision-making, with the objective of improving community wellbeing and the benefit to future generations.

- (3) Public health practices and procedures should be cost effective and in proportion to the significance of the public health risks and consequences being addressed.

2. Precautionary principle

- (1) If there is a public health risk, lack of scientific certainty should not be used as a reason for postponing measures to prevent, control or abate that risk.
- (2) In the application of the precautionary principle, decision-making should be guided by —
 - (a) a careful evaluation to avoid, where practicable, harm to public health; and
 - (b) an assessment of the risk-weighted consequences of the options.

3. Principle of proportionality

- (1) Decisions made and actions taken in the administration of this Act to prevent, control or abate a public health risk should be proportionate to the public health risk sought to be prevented, controlled or abated.
- (2) In the application of the principle of proportionality, decision-making and action should be guided by the aim that, where measures that adversely impact on an individual's or business's activities or a community's functioning are necessary, measures that have the least adverse impact are taken before measures with a greater adverse impact.

4. Principle of intergenerational equity

The present generation should ensure that public health is maintained or enhanced for the benefit of future generations.

5. Principle relating to local government

The functions of local governments in relation to public health should be acknowledged and respected.

 - (b) if the order is varied under section 116(5), the decision to vary the order.
- (2) The State Administrative Tribunal must hear and determine the application as a matter of priority and urgency.
- (3) Without limiting the matters that the State Administrative Tribunal may consider in determining the application, the State Administrative Tribunal must consider —
 - (a) the method by which the notifiable infectious disease named in the public health order is transmitted; and
 - (b) the seriousness of the risk that the applicant may transmit that disease to other people; and
 - (c) the past behaviour and likely behaviour of the applicant; and
 - (d) the extent of the restrictions imposed on the applicant.

128. Restriction on making of further public health order

- (1) This section applies to a person in respect of whom a public health order is made if the order ceases to have effect —
 - (a) as the result of being revoked by a further order made under section 116; or
 - (b) as the result of —
 - (i) the decision of the State Administrative Tribunal on a review under section 127; or
 - (ii) an appeal from that decision.
- (2) A further public health order may be made in respect of a person to whom this section applies only if the Chief Health Officer reasonably believes that, since the earlier public health order ceased to have effect, there has been a change in the person's health or behaviour that increases the risk of the person transmitting a notifiable infectious disease to another person.

129. Recognition of interstate public health orders

- (1) In this section —

corresponding law means a provision of a law of another State, a Territory or the Commonwealth that is prescribed by the regulations to be a corresponding law for the purposes of this section; order includes a notice, requirement or direction.

- (2) This section applies if —
 - (a) a person is subject to an order under a corresponding law; and
 - (b) the terms of the order provide for matters that could be the subject (wholly or substantially) of a public health order under this Division; and
 - (c) the person enters this State.

- (3) If this section applies, the order to which the person is subject operates in this State, in accordance with this section, as if it were a public health order made under this Division, but with the following modifications —
 - (a) the order has the terms set out in the order or applying to it under the law of the jurisdiction in which it was made, with any variations made under subsection (5)(a) or section 116(5);
 - (b) section 127(1)(a) does not apply.
- (4) An order that operates in this State under subsection (3) has no effect until a copy of the order (with or without any variations made under subsection (5)(a)) is served personally in accordance with section 118(1) or (2).
- (5) If an order operates in this State under subsection (3) —
 - (a) the Chief Health Officer may, by written notice served in accordance with section 130(2), vary the order as it operates in this State, but only to the extent reasonably necessary for its effective operation in this State; and
 - (b) the order ceases to operate in this State if —
 - (i) the order expires or is revoked under the corresponding law; or
 - (ii) the Chief Health Officer revokes the order under section 116(5).

130. Further provisions applying to interstate public health orders operating in this State

- (1) Section 119 applies, with all necessary changes, to an order to which section 129 applies as if the order were a public health order made under this Division.

- (2) If a notice is given under section 129(5)(a) varying an order to which section 129 applies —
 - (a) sections 118 and 119 apply, with all necessary changes, to the notice; and
 - (b) the person who is subject to the order may apply to the State Administrative Tribunal under section 127(1)(b) as if the order had been varied under section 116(5).
- (3) The variation, under section 129(5)(a), of an order to which section 129 applies does not prevent the order being varied under section 116(5).
- (4) The fact that an order to which section 129 applies has ceased to operate in this State does not prevent a public health order subsequently being made under this Division in relation to the same person.
