- (1) Subject to subsection (2), if —
- (a) a preventative detention order is in force in relation to a person; and
 - (b) a police officer believes on reasonable grounds that the person is on, at or in any place, the police officer may enter the place for the purpose of searching the place for the person or taking the person into custody.

- (2) A police officer must not enter any place that is used for residential purposes at any time during the period commencing at 9 p.m. on a day and ending at 6 a.m. on the following day unless the police officer believes on reasonable grounds that —

- (a) it would not be practicable to take the person into custody, either at that place or elsewhere, at another time; or
- (b) it is necessary to do so in order to prevent the concealment, loss or destruction of evidence of, or relating to, a terrorist act.

29. Use of force

In the course of —

- (a) taking a person into custody under a preventative detention order; or
- (b) preventing the escape of a person who is being detained by a police officer under a preventative detention order, a police officer —

- (c) must not use more force, or subject the person to greater indignity, than is reasonably necessary in the circumstances; and
- (d) must not use force which causes death or grievous bodily harm unless that force is used lawfully in self-defence or defence of another.

30. Power to search people

- (1) If a police officer who takes a person into custody under a preventative detention order, or who is present when the person is taken into custody, reasonably suspects —

- (a) that it is prudent to search the person in order to ascertain whether the person is carrying any seizable items; or
- (b) that the person is carrying any seizable items or evidence of, or relating to, a terrorist act,

s. 31

the police officer may do a basic search or strip search (as defined in Schedule 2 clause 1) of the person at, or soon after, the time when the person is taken into custody, and seize any seizable items or evidence of, or relating to, a terrorist act found as a result of the search.

- (2) Schedule 2 applies in relation to a search of a person under this section.
- (3) A police officer must not do a strip search of a person under subsection (1) unless the officer reasonably suspects —
 - (a) that a strip search is necessary; and
 - (b) that the seriousness and urgency of the situation require a strip search to be done.
- (4) This section does not affect the carrying out of any search that may lawfully be carried out when a person is taken into detention, or is in detention, in an institution or lock-up.

- (2) The police officer must take such steps as are necessary to ensure that the person may be dealt with in accordance with the warrant.
- (3) Without limiting subsection (2), the police officer may, under section 32, release the person from detention under the preventative detention order so that the person may be dealt with in accordance with the warrant.

- (4) To avoid doubt, the fact that the person is released from detention under the preventative detention order so that the person may be —
- (a) questioned under the warrant before a prescribed authority appointed under the ASIO Act section 34B; or
 - (b) detained under the warrant in connection with that questioning, does not extend the period for which the preventative detention order remains in force in relation to the person.

[Section 31 amended by No. 1 of 2008 s. 4.]

32. Release of person from preventative detention

- (1) The police officer who is detaining a person under a preventative detention order may release the person from detention under the order.

Note: A person may be released, for example, so that the person may be arrested and otherwise dealt with for a suspected offence.

- (2) The police officer who releases the person from detention under the preventative detention order must give the person a signed written statement that the person is being released from that detention and identifies the police officer who signs it.
- (3) Subsection (2) does not apply if the police officer releases the person from detention so that the person may —

- (6) To avoid doubt, a person is taken not to be detained under a preventative detention order during a period during which the person is released from detention under the order.

Note: During this period, the provisions of this Part that apply to a person who is in detention under a preventative detention order (for example, section 40(1) which deals with the people the person may contact) do not apply to the person.

- (7) To avoid doubt —
 - (a) the release of the person under subsection (1) from detention under the preventative detention order does not extend the period for which the preventative detention order remains in force; and
- Note: This means that the time for which the person may be detained under the order continues to run while the person is released.
- (b) a person released under subsection (1) from detention under a preventative detention order may again be taken into custody and kept in detention under the order at any time while the order remains in force in relation to the person.
